AT OTHER FACTORIES

From The Sunday Star.

"During the course of investigation fifty-three manufactories of ice cream in the District of Columbia have been visited in order to determine the sanitary condition prevailing where this food product is manufactured. In 62 per cent of the places the ice cream is made in the basement or cellar. In nearly all cases they are improperly constructed to meet the demand of sanitary conditions. The ceilings are low and generally show a gross collection of filth and cobwebs on the rough joists overhead. Occasionally a ceiling is finished with a metal ceiling or plaster, but even when such improvements are noticed the absence of natural proper light or ventilation generally makes the cellar basement in Washington an unfit place for the manufacture or preparation of ice cream. Many of the buildings are of old-time construction and were not originally designed for the present-day purposes. With such construction as they show it is practically impossible to keep the average basement or cellar in a proper and fit condition for the handling of milk, cream and milk products, no matter how honest and thorough may be the attempts of the tenants to do so.

"In many cases," the report continues, "the tenants have much to contend with and report that their landlords are wholly unwilling to make alterations or necessary improvements, and if such are made it must be done entirely at the expense of the tenant. Sometimes, however, the fault does not lie exclusively with the landlord. Very frequently the basement of these establishments is used not only for the manufacture of ice cream and frozen dairies, but also as a storage room for all the old waste which may have accumulated for years past—old broken furniture, scraps of metal, cast-off clothing, broken boxes, barrels, moth-eaten rugs, matting. In fact, one may find just such worthless stuff as generally collects about the dwelling house in the course of time. Such articles must, of course, pollute, and most dangerously, any food products which are brought into their proximity. While the nature of the bacterial flora found in the foodstuffs manufactured in these insanitary surroundings fully bears out the truth of the above statement, while the premises are themselves of insanitary construction, an immense benefit would accrue to the consumers of ice cream if a general housecleaning on the part of the tenants were demanded and enforced.
